Agreed-upon Conditions

As a result of the numerous experiences and studies in this field from the experts who are engaged in such services, the attendees of the tenth annual conference of the Council of Shi'a Muslim Scholars in North America who participated in the final resolution, endorsed these terms and conditions, in hopes that following these terms will be an important factor in achieving marital happiness and steering it away from harm with the will of the Almighty. These terms and conditions are not limited to those mentioned hereto, they are merely suggestions given by the experts and they are by no means binding unless agreed upon by both parties. The only terms that are considered binding within these terms and conditions are those agreed upon by the two parties and are within this document or have been added hereto.

We request that both parties seeking marriage within this contract attain the booklet entitled "Marriage and Divorce, Rights and Obligations" provided by The Council of Shi'a Muslim Scholars of North America. This booklet provides information which is important for both to learn about the rights, obligations, and manners of marriage. It is also requested that both parties review the civil law of the state so that they may understand their rights and obligations from a legal standpoint. Based upon this:

- ❖ The husband grants the wife, within this marriage contract, transferrable irrevocable agency in divorcing herself, after attaining permission from the Shi'a Ithna 'Asheri jurist, or his official representative to take permission from him (the Jurist, in the matter of divorce.)
- ❖ In the case that the wife has attained a civil divorce in countries that do not accept religious divorces, the wife then has the right to use her agency, in accordance with the Islamic law, to divorce herself.
- ❖ The agency given in this agreement is limited to the conditions mentioned below:
